LIBERATE YOUR IDEAS! AND WRITE A PLAY IN 24 HOURS!

Whether armed with a pen and paper, a laptop or a typewriter, participants are given the challenge to write a play within 24 hours in TheatreWorks' 24-Hour Playwriting Competition.

The competition provides a platform to liberate ideas and to create new writing; and what better place to inspire the spirit of liberation than at the Sun Yat Sen Nanyang Memorial Hall? Reopened to the public in October 2011, the Memorial Hall traces Dr. Sun's revolutionary activities in the Southeast Asian region and highlights the impact of the 1911 Chinese Revolution on Singapore as well as Singapore's contributions to the Revolution.

One of the winning plays will be treated to a full production and taken on a performance tour of 10 venues in the South East District in 2013/ 2014.

Organised by TheatreWorks Writers' Laboratory in collaboration with South East Community Development Council, the 24-Hour Playwriting Competition is in its 16th year! The competition has been a popular annual event in Singapore.

Registration is NOW OPEN!
Only 70 places available.

Download the registration form at www.theatreworks.org.sg and please note that registration closes at 3 August 2013.

WRITE A PLAY IN 24 HOURS? YES, YOU CAN!

Ever wondered what it takes to write for the theatre and the stage? Join us for Writing for Theatre - an interactive writers' seminar conceived and facilitated by Dr. Robin Loon, which will discuss the fundamentals of writing for the stage; locate pitfalls to avoid; explore ways to navigate one's imagination and skills specifically for theatre writing.

Writing for Theatre - an interactive writers' seminar is only open to participants of the 24-Hour Playwriting Competition 2013. Sign up early as there are limited spaces available for each seminar!
